What job i'm looking for? My positive points

I have worked 8 years. In the initial seven years of my career, I held the position of Company Administrator, Sales Consultant. Mechanical Operator and now most recent Service Adviser.

Over the past few years I have attained an excellent work ethic both individually and when working in team situations, I feel I am a natural born leader and am not afraid to think on my feet and make logical decisions in crunch situations but given the time I am not a rash decision maker. I have always placed a lot of importance on good communication skills which I can adhere. My interaction with people is excellent which results in happy customers. I do believe my general passion for technology makes me an asset to any firm as I am generally always looking for the ability to streamline processes and maximise my productivity. I work in a structured manner and set intermediate deadlines whilst within the duration of a project. I believe in documenting any and all assumptions for clarity and have no disillusions about making a mistake. When I have made mistakes in the past I find that I always learn from them and will not make that mistake twice. I believe I am always learning and eager to learn
