What job i'm looking for? My positive points

I'm looking for something different. I've worked in customer service and retail for years and now I think it's time to change jobs. Explore something different like secretarial or receptionist. I just want to start a career that I can grow in as a person with a company that prioritizes their employees. Definitely something different. I'm a hard working person, very dedicated to my work and highly enthusiastic about what I do. If I love that job I put my 100% into it. I'm always willing to and ready to learn which is why I'm now opting for a different career goal. I accept when I'm wrong and I happily welcome it when someone corrects my mistake because I believe that is how we grow as individuals. Dear potential employers that fact that I have zero experience in administrative work and desiring to work there despite my lack of experience should not deter you from giving me the opportunity to prove myself. Everyone deserve the chance to prove their worth. And I am no exception.
